Theme

This conference will focus on socio-political dynamics in Palestinian society since the end of Palestinian Authority's policies followed by the practice of clientelism, corruption and inability to meet the needs of the Palestinian population in a context of rise of Israeli settlements in the territories, while the Palestinian Authority has achieved nothing during twenty-three years of negotiations with Israel.

The conference will also discuss the signing of the Oslo Accord and the establishment of a Palestinian autonomous power over an insignificant part of Palestine which already saw the creation of a "new State", the state of the Palestinians. The Oslo Accords ended in open conflict, the current Palestine no longer resemble the one evoked by these Accords. Symbolic independence, symbolic nationality, symbolic return: would the Palestinian state be reduced to a new form, that of a state-symbol?

Finally, the conference will tackle the rise of social and political discontent, taking place amid oppressive colonization and crisis in the Palestinian political representation or the Palestinian project itself.
